

SOCIETY

THE midsummer season, characterized in Richmond by social quiet and absence of formal entertainments, is the time when leaders in social affairs map out their plans for the coming autumn and winter campaigns, and heads of historic and patriotic organizations decide on how to accomplish matters that will be vitally important to their estimation for the interest they have in charge.

The Daughters of the Confederacy have already announced the work they have taken up and mean to carry through before they attempt anything else of magnitude, and that is the placing of Confederate graves in Richmond under the perpetual care of cemetery organizations, so that their memorial work will be always kept up, even when the Confederate women who inaugurated it are no more. Every Southern State has soldiers buried here, so that the Legislatures of these different States will be called on for appropriations to complete the amount required to have the graves looked after in perpetuity.

The Daughters will put forward all their energies next winter to bring this memorial work to a successful finish and nothing that they have ever done will have been neglected for so many years. I sincerely hope that the example of Richmond Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, has not forgotten to add its mite in behalf of the effort now being made by the Blue Ridge Industrial School. The Rev. George P. Mayo has recently written from that school to the president of Richmond Chapter: "It is splendid in the Daughters of the Confederacy to help in this effort to uplift these poor people who have been neglected for so many years. I sincerely hope that the example of Richmond Chapter will be followed by others. It is the best monument you can build, I think."

Dames to Mark Historic Sites. The Colonial Dames have outlined work for themselves also. They desire to mark the site of the first projected university in Virginia and the United States, at Henricopolis, on James River, the plans for which were overthrown by the Indian massacre of 1622. The Dames offer annual prizes at the University of Virginia and in the girls' schools of the city and State for the best essays on colonial subjects and are deeply interested in the work of restoration and preservation at Jamestown island and at many other important historic points throughout Virginia.

D. A. R.'s Actively Patriotic. The Daughters of the American Revolution are full of energy and activity, and have many schemes ahead to show their interest in the period they represent and the heroes who made American history at that time.

Full Field for Work. The Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities has a full field for future active work in completing the purchase of the Powder Horn at Williamsburg, the Rising Sun Tavern at Fredericksburg, and in carrying on improvements projected at Jamestown Island. The association is looking forward to the autumn and winter as a period of hard work, to be undertaken with resolute hearts and carried through with union of interests in hand and purpose.

Brilliant Year's Program. The members of Woman's Club having made good their fight and title to success in financing, in so far as the purchase of their home is concerned, are looking forward with pleasure to a brilliant social and literary program for the coming year, one which they will enjoy themselves, and by means of which they will confer a great amount of enjoyment on others.

At Country Club. Much interest is felt by the women of Richmond in the work of the Young Woman's Christian Association in the Country Club, where young women may find much outdoor pleasure and recreation after business hours.

Continuation of Our Most Successful July Clearing Sale

An unprecedented week's selling brings the odd and surplus lots of fine merchandise we desire to close out more conspicuously to the front and makes prices go down proportionately. Where one line sells out it will be immediately replaced by another equally attractive and low in price. Only half of the real clearing news gets into our announcements. Every section of this establishment contributes to this great sale.

Suits and Dresses at Clearance Prices

We have arranged an extraordinary reduction sale of Linen and Lingerie Dresses, also Linene, Repp, Linen and Ramie Suits. These garments comprise one, two and three-piece models, and are being sold at cost and less than cost. Of special importance is the fact that this great Clearance Sale is composed of the odds and ends of this season's stock, and not goods made up especially for a sale. The models are extremely desirable, the most favored of the season's designs, beautifully made and finished, and now being offered at one-half to one-third of their original cost.

Millinery Clearance Now in Progress

It seems scarcely necessary to print more than the mere announcement of this event, as this occasion is exceedingly profitable to you. Your opportunity has arrived. It's after the Fourth you expect low prices, and Kaufmann's policy is to give them. The entire stock, both from our wholesale and retail departments, is included in this great sale. The finest of Trimmed Hats are being sold at less than the cost of the material, and Untrimmed Shapes and Sailors are being sacrificed. Perhaps you can use another hat for the going away and summer season. If so, this is your great opportunity.

Radical Reductions in Accessories

In connection with the two above-named departments, extra reductions have been made in Parasols, Undermuslins, Waists, Neck Fixings, etc., etc. Not one section of this establishment has been overlooked in making this Clearing Sale the greatest bargain-giving and price-cutting event in the history of Richmond. We advise an early visit in order to secure the choicest.
